a long and rewarding professional accounting career. To assist in your pursuit of the above, the firm offers flexible working hours to all staff.

The firm of EPR Kielstra & Company isn't about the talk – we understand and share your ambitions and objectives and we intend to deliver. We are here to help you gain the practical experience you require, study for and pass your professional exams and, ultimately, earn your designation. To help you achieve your goals, we pay for all of the required courses and exam sitting fees, regardless of whether you are in the CA, CMA or CGA program. We offer a combination of paid and unpaid study leave to facilitate exam preparation. All of our students have access to the experienced members on our team as we maintain an open door policy.

Our commitment to you does not end with your designation. We continue to pay for regular professional development and other relevant programs of study. We also provide monthly “lunch and learn sessions”, which are in-house technical training sessions that cover issues in accounting and auditing, personal and corporate income tax and other pertinent areas of practice. In addition, we pay for your professional association and membership fees.

Many of your peers may be debating the advantages and disadvantages between larger and smaller firm training. At the firm of EPR Kielstra & Company, the advantages are many. We are small enough to offer a relaxed, flexible and sociable working environment where all of our students gain valuable hands-on accounting, auditing and taxation experience from the beginning to the end of a file. We are large enough to offer our students the experience of working on a unique mix of small to medium sized for-profit and not-for-profit businesses within various industry sectors. We also have the resources required to augment the educational and professional efforts of our staff including use of the latest technology.

If you are interested in pursuing your accounting designation within a firm offering full benefits, a competitive salary, a strong work-life balance and a high level of commitment to professional excellence – we are the firm you are looking for.

Thank you for your interest in EPR Kilestra & Company, Chartered Accountants. Only candidates selected for an interview will be contacted.
